

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

A LARGE wealth of special literature exists in the regular publications or incidental books and pamphlets of societies organized for publishing in a special field or of whose work publications form an integral part. The number of these societies is legion, and they have existed in America for a century or more. The records of early societies are most inadequate and there has been no adequate record even of societies now current. There have been several noteworthy special bibliographies, notably Griffin's of Historical Societies, and Growoll's of Book Clubs, and several general bibliographies have made an incidental feature of lists of the publications of societies. This was done to some extent in the early catalogues of James Kelly, and a like feature on a more extended scale has been included in appendixes to the later American Catalogues for the periods 1876-84, 1884-90, and 1890-95. The first of these last-named lists was compiled by the present editor with the coöperation of the Smithsonian Institution, of Harvard University Library, of the Boston Public Library, and of the Boston Athenæum Library. These libraries have continued to coöperate in the successive lists, and the Boston Public Library has also included in its comprehensive and useful list of periodicals, etc., currently received in the principal libraries of Boston, issued under the direction of Mr. Jas. L. Whitney, the titles of transactions and other serial publications of societies, though without entry of individual issues.

There is almost no field in bibliography so important to the special student, and there are few so fruitful to the general inquirer, as that of the publications of "learned societies," whose number and importance in this country has grown within the past generation quite beyond precedent in any other country or period. The historical societies, in regard to which the later Western States have taken so advanced and creditable a position, constitute but one of many lines of development. The issues of such societies as the Grolier Club, the Filson Club, the Dunlap Club, are of great importance to the scholar and collector, and they are rarely to be found in ordinary catalogues.

It seemed most desirable that some general bibliography of the publications of American publishing societies should be undertaken, and the present endeavor is the outcome. Like the lists of the special periods referred to, it is based on direct correspondence with the several societies so far as they still exist and word could be had from them. Special bibliographies and the coöperation of the authorities of the libraries mentioned and of other libraries have also been utilized to the utmost. In addition to the acknowledgment specifically made in previous lists, thanks are especially due to Mr. Wilberforce Eames, of the Lenox Library, for his liberal and generous expenditure of personal time and trouble in the obtaining of material and in the examination of proofs; to Mr. Hérbert Putnam, recently librarian of the Boston Public Library and now of the Library of Congress; to Mr. John S. Browne, of the New York Academy of Medicine; to the officers of the leading universities, and to many others, for much valuable assistance, without which even the imperfect result here presented would have been impossible. The immediate work of compiling the present list has been in the hands of Mr. William Potts, whose long and honorable relationship with a certain class of societies had made him familiar with this kind of work, although not professionally a bibliographer. It is to the regret of the editor that his absence abroad during much of the compilation prevented his full personal attention to details of the work; and the more credit should therefore be given to Mr. Potts for his large share in the present result.

The imperfections of these contributions toward a bibliography of American publishing societies, which it is hoped may result ultimately in a really adequate bibliography, cannot be more evident to any critic than to those responsible for the publication. Many of these imperfections, however, are inseparable from any first attempt to gather into one compilation so much diverse material from so many independent sources. In the case of early societies, no longer existing, nothing more could be done than to make the best of existing records, in the hope that the later coöperation of librarians, after the publication of the work, may be of help in filling evident gaps and may add unsuspected material. In the important permanent societies — which have existed for many years — the frequent change of officers and of addresses, where there are no permanent headquarters, libraries, or secretaries, has made it a task of especial difficulty to obtain continuous information from the beginning, but a happy result of the inquiry, in many cases, has been to stimulate such societies toward a better bibliographical record of their own publications. Many such societies lack a complete file of their own issues. Some societies known to exist failed altogether to respond to the repeated inquiries for information, and in such cases nothing more could be done than to utilize the information that could be gleaned indirectly from existing bibliographies and from library shelves. In every case the endeavor has been made to send a proof of the list of each society to its proper officer, but in many cases these proofs were not returned or were returned without adequate examination and revision.

The present bibliography covers over a thousand societies, but doubtless omits many societies which properly belong in such a list. It has been the endeavor to include all national, State, or general societies known or supposed to issue publications of general or technical interest. With some no list of issues is given; in these cases no word was obtainable from the society, and it is possible that such are not really publishing societies. It has not been attempted to include county medical associations, teachers' institutes, and such bodies, whose numbers are legion, though they may semi-occasionally issue publications; nor societies or institutions issuing merely reports of their own affairs, unless, like the Prison Association, Charity Organization societies, etc., these bear upon general public questions; nor catalogues of colleges, libraries, etc., unless they have historical or other special value; nor those of art or other exhibitions — but it has been very difficult to draw any satisfactory line between inclusion and exclusion.

It has been impracticable in the present work to follow a consistently systematic method of entry. In the case of each society the endeavor has been to give its correct official name, as well as cross-references from other names and from names of localities, and to include the date of its organization, the name and address of its present secretary or other representative, and its place of headquarters. Entries as a rule are chronological; series, however, precede individual volumes. Special attention is called to the growing importance of the publications of universities and colleges, and in this field the information supplied by Harvard and Yale universities presents a model of systematized arrangement. It is to be regretted that the information from other universities having such departments could not have been conformed to these excellent models; this, however, was rendered impossible from the fact that the Harvard and Yale lists came after the less satisfactory form had been adopted for the other universities. In some cases, such as the American Anti-Slavery Society and the United States Sanitary Commission, little more has been possible than to point out sources of information from which it is hoped an adequate bibliography may be obtained later.

In recording the publications of societies it has been extremely difficult to draw the line between publications by societies and publications concerning societies but not issued by them. There is also not a little confusion as to series which have been discontinued and resumed, or of which the title has from time to time been changed. In the case of several series it has not been possible to obtain individual entries for the earlier numbers, and in the case of others the representatives of the societies have utterly failed to respond to requests for information as to issues later than those scheduled. The list was intended to bring the publications up to the date of July, 1898, and systematic entry has not been attempted later than that date. It is to be hoped that this volume will make clear the way for a revision or a later publication, completing the nineteenth century record. Such an issue will not, however, be possible unless the present volume receives support in the way of subscriptions from libraries and others interested, and coöperation from librarians and society officers in filling gaps. The publication has been a labor of love on the part of the editor, who does not expect to obtain from it the actual return for the money outlay, but does hope that the deficit may not be so great as to preclude further publication on these lines. It is not intended to include in the American Catalogue for 1895-1900 an appendix covering publishing societies, its place being filled for the most part by the present list.

It is impossible for any library to make a complete collection of the publications of American publishing societies, and it is difficult to get even an adequate representation of the leading societies or of the local societies which each local library should especially represent. A bibliography of this sort is therefore of special value because it enables each library to furnish to students and inquirers information as to material existing in special fields, and makes possible, under the system of inter-loan of books which is becoming prevalent in American libraries, the obtaining of the actual material for the use of special students. This bibliography, therefore, in a measure supplies the lack on the library shelves of the publications which it records. If its publication shall lead publishing societies to make better bibliographies and more adequate collections of their issues, shall stimulate libraries to greater pains in furnishing their shelves with the publications of local and general societies, and shall lead ultimately to the issue of a really adequate bibliography of American publishing societies, the editor's labors and expenditures will not have been without sufficing reward.
